

WHERE TO START

The driving range is a practice facility where you can work on your game without fear of hitting fellow players, losing golf balls or totally embarrassing yourself. It is not, however, golf – golf is played on a golf course.

One of the advantages of the driving range is that you don't necessarily need to have your own equipment. Unlike golf on the course, it's perfectly acceptable to share your mate's clubs at the driving range, and we suggest grabbing something between a 6- and 9-iron to begin with. If you don't have any golfing mates willing to share their clubs, most ranges will have some clubs that you can rent out for the session.
