On behalf of Silver Lakes, it is my pleasure to welcome you to this wonderful golf course. We are all very proud of our club and its status as one of the premier courses in Gauteng and it is our honour to host the SA Women's IPT 2022. Our course is in superb condition after months of hard work from our golf director, the greenkeeper, and staff. While it might be demanding, it is usually a fair and enjoyable course. I trust that the course and the warm welcome you will receive from our staff will provide you with a memorable and enjoyable golfing experience, and also, one that you will be keen to repeat. Tip for the tournament: "Sometimes when you play a golf course for the first time, you've just got to be committed to your targets."

Sarah Braude
President
Womens Golf
South Africa

The SA Women's Inter-Provincial Championship is undoubtedly one of the most anticipated team events of the year. Steeped in history, we are thrilled to be returning to Gauteng North and Silver Lakes Golf & Wildlife Estate to celebrate the 61st playing of this prestigious championship. Gauteng North last hosted the SA Women's IPT in 2015 and this year we see the host Union fielding teams in both the A and B Division. Thank you to Gauteng North Golf Union, Paul Davel (President), Madeleine de Wet (Vice President), the Executive and the staff, for all your assistance in the preparations for the Championship. Silver Lakes is a world-class Peter Matkovich signature golf course and is recognised as one of the "Top 10 Most Eco Friendly golf courses in the World", and has been voted the "Best Golf Course" in Pretoria at the Best of Pretoria Awards. It will be an outstanding test of golf for the 16 teams competing in the A & B divisions. Thank you to Silver Lakes, the Homeowners Association, Brendon van Nieuwenhuisen (Golf Manager) and all the staff for their welcome, assistance and partnership in hosting this championship. We know you are proud hosts and thank the members and residents for giving up your course for the week. We look forward to seeing you on the fairways. Western Province are defending champions and the 2021 B Division champions Eastern Province were promoted to the A Division. I am sure that all the teams will come out firing eager to get their 2022 campaign off to a strong start. Welcome to all the players and managers. I know that you will represent your Union with pride and excellence, play all your matches in the spirit of the game, and showcase the incredible talent of women golfers in South Africa - and leave with wonderful memories of 2022.

CEO
GolfRSA

On behalf of GolfRSA, I'd like to welcome you to the 2022 SA Women's Inter-Provincial Tournament at Silver Lakes. IPT week is always an important one in the calendar, as it not only brings the country's best golfers together for a fiercely contested tournament, but allows the provincial administrators to get into a room and make some important decisions. To the golfers, first of all a massive congratulations on being selected to represent your province. I trust you will enjoy the week ahead and play to the best of your ability. I was able to watch some of last year's event at Rondebosch Golf Club, where Western Province narrowly pipped Central Gauteng in an epic tussle that went down to the last singles match, and I was impressed with the level of golf on display. We have wonderful structures in place that help us produce so many fine players and the unions play a major role in identifying and developing promising golfers. Finally, a big thank you to all those who have been involved in putting this tournament together, from the host union and club and all those who have worked tirelessly behind the scenes.

Silver Lakes Golf & Wildlife Estate epitomizes idyllic and peaceful estate living. The estate has been developed around a world class, Peter Matkovich signature golf course and a game reserve that offers spectacular views of the lakes and tranquil surroundings. As a formidable industry leader, Silver Lakes Golf and Wildlife Estate has successfully cultivated an outstanding reputation and true sense of belonging in the East of Pretoria, instinctively making it a premier piece of property for families wanting to embrace a wonderfully idyllic lifestyle, yet remain conveniently located to the capital. As the first estate of its kind in Pretoria, Silver Lakes Golf and Wildlife Estate has stood the test of time for more than a quarter of a century and continues to be appealing as a truly iconic residential area.

The development of Silver Lakes was the brainchild of the property arm of the giant corporation Anglo American. Selborne Park, south of Durban, was South Africa's first golf estate, a business model which was replicated at Dainfern in the late 1980s. It seemed natural that with Pretoria's burgeoning suburbia heading eastwards of the capital city, the time was right to launch a similar development in that area. The course architect commissioned to design and construct the course was Peter Matkovich. "I wasn't given a specific brief at Silver Lakes," he explained, "the developers didn't want the course to be too tough, and as we always do, we tried to find a fair balance between playability while adding some spice." The original property had a single dam fed by rainfall runoff from surrounding areas, and this was re-shaped to fit within the course's layout (now a major feature of the par-five 14th), but considerable work was done constructing other water features so the name "Silver Lakes" certainly became appropriate.

“What is particularly pleasing is the mix of challenges, and the course has a high memorability factor.”

The first-time golfer is likely to discover that although the layout is comparatively short from the club tees, scoring is not that easy. There are some rather tight holes, and besides the out-of-bounds and the more obvious water hazards, the trees can also present a problem for slightly errant shots. What is particularly pleasing is the mix of challenges, and the course has a high memorability factor. After a gentle introduction to the course (the opening hole is a relatively straightforward par four that doglegs to the right), a rather quirky, three-shot par five follows, a hole that features trees in the fairway that can bedevil the tee shot or the lay-up. After a rather ordinary par three, an excellent par four follows, where a dual fairway encourages the longer hitter to take a line over a wetland, but the more conservative route is to go left and face an intimidating approach to a green surrounded by water and bunkers. Another good par four is followed by a par five that is well within range with two solid shots, but again water comes into play. The 8th hole is one of the more contentious creations – again a split fairway, more water, and well worthy of its low rating. A simple little par three completes the outward nine; a pleasant enough hole which is spoiled by the towering palm trees that are perhaps better suited to a desert oasis than Pretoria. The back nine has a completely different feel – again a gentle start which requires an average length tee shot followed by a short- or medium iron, but after this a series of excellent holes follow. The 11th requires an accurate tee shot and a solid approach to green that can accommodate some fiendish pin positions, and the hole that follows is as good a four as any – certainly the toughest two-shotter on the course. Next is a brilliant par three – around 180 metres with water guarding the front-right of the green. The par-five 14th features another dual fairway – the stronger player can play to the “island” fairway, most would be advised to keep left of the lake; certainly one of many interesting holes here that are not easily forgotten. A short, driveable par four, another excellent par three, and a beautiful par four with water left of the green sets up the home stretch, finishing with a very good par five featuring a peninsula green. Like at every good golf course, golfers of all abilities will always walk off after their initiation here and be itching to have another attempt. In an era where so many golf clubs are struggling to keep the wolf from the door, Silver Lakes has convincingly bucked this trend – and is a glowing example of how a golf operation can be self-sustaining, creating a vibrant club with enthusiastic members.
